New Group of Villains! Order of Disturbance destroying the city

HEATHER HAILEY

It could have been a perfectly normal day, a boring simple Tuesday. But it never is. We all know that this is not something that happens in this city. Every day is plastered with acts of so called “hero-ism”, with absolute disregard of the rest of the population. Same can be said about the villains, of course. But there rarely is a villain that destroyed as much of the city than any given hero, when we just count the damage to buildings.

But those numbers are about to change. And apparently not even the heroes or Aegis knew about it or could have done anything to stop it.

We all know the villain called “Blind Viper” (see Issue #2 for more details). Nothing too fancy about this guy, wearing a full on overall with fitting head gear, all of us assumed he was just another small fish that heroes can use as a punching back. But not this time. Blind Viper announced the arrival of a new group of villains, called the “Order of Disturbance”. He said, that their goal is to make real peace, equality and freedom.

His whole speech, that was live-broadcasted throughout the entire city and appeared on any functioning electronic device, listed of, that not the villains are the bad guys, but the society we live in. It is hard to disagree on that, since we all as a society can agree, that we need to do better, overall.

He continued to tell the city, that they were not always villains, but were branded as them long before they ever became active crime-doers. Most of us innocent citizens would disagree completely, because there are certain levels of law-breaking, before one gets labelled as a villain. Only true hideous acts and a costume are the dead give-aways for villainry.

But that was not all. After introducing himself and the Order, he declared they’re not just villains, they’re, as he put it, “revolutionaries”.

He also said, that they begged for change, for a long time. We cannot verify this, but it could be possible, that Blind Viper and his gang could be some sorts of environmental activists, or maybe even volunteer-workers.

But what happened then was breathtaking. Explosions occurred all over the city. We don’t know exactly how many hot-spots were hit, but at every point of impact, at least one other villain appeared, one more crazy than the one before.

Between all the rubble and destruction, those new villains, that have never been seen before, stirred the pot even more. They attacked civilians, innocent bystanders and buildings. One of those explosions was really close to the Daily Slice Building, so we felt the impact really close.

A.E.G.I.S. send out as many heroes as they could, and all the other active heroes in the city rushed out to help and fight as well. The Order even managed to get mostly retired heroes back on their feet, so we finally got another glimpse of Inflammable again, who was burning with hatred. Fiery Hornet appeared in another part of town and dealt with a villain called Nightclaw, managing to hold him off long enough.

Most other heroes defeated similar opponents, when suddenly they all retreated, as if they were called back, leaving dust and destruction behind.

Officials still need to make an official statement regarding the situation and the usefulness of heroes, seeing as still so much got destroyed, but almost none of the villains could be identified or even detained.

Newsflash! Airborne nothing more than hot air?

HEATHER HAILEY

Everybody know the super hot and generally loved hero-sidekick Airborne. With his youthful appearance and general nice attitude, he really looks like the perfect boyfriend. There is not a single teenager and older out here, who hasn’t thought about dating the cutie-pie.

But according to rumors, he vanished from Cape Coast High, even though there was a villain actively attacking the school! Witnesses claim, he was seen helping Orothos, his mentor, somewhere downtown.

Isn’t CC-High his high school? Shouldn’t it be his priority to save it? Or is he maybe just good-looking and not real hero material?

Airborn, the cutest sidekick. But does he suffer from incompetence?

The Aftermath of Terrorism

The Order of Disturbance attacked seven different places throughout the city. One of them was the City Centre.

JIM JORDAN JASON

When we all woke up yesterday morning, we would have never thought to be caught up in such a mess. That we would be the center of attention for such a gruesome act of violence.

It is true, we’re living with heroes and villains for a long time, but this attack was different from any other before. We never saw a villain group this big And none of them ever introduced themselves with a literal big bang like this. They have a meaning behind their deeds – is what they want to make us believe.

But what if all of this is just an orchestrated terrorist attack? What if it was planned for a long time?

We all remember the events of 9/11 vividly. How could we ever forget the most tragic moment in all of American History ever? The biggest and most gruesome terrorist attack this country has ever suffered. A tragedy that will never end.

And precisely because of that, maybe those villains worked together with people really high up to stir up another tragedy. To mimic acts of terrorism. To vindicate our feelings and make us remember how bad it was.

That would explain why, surprisingly enough, not even a hundred people died during the attacks. We have a few thousand injured ones, but deaths during the attack were really low. Maybe this was not an act of outward danger, but danger from within.

Nothing is known about the villains that attacked the city, we only know the name Blind Viper, that just so happens to be not defeated by Phoenix Punch. Is this really just a coincidence? We just know one thing: We will stay and live.

Inflammable back in ACTION?!

Big Reunion with PP

JACKSON POLLUCK

The really famous superhero Inflammable, that tried to vanish from the public a few years ago was forced to come back from retirement. She fought against the villains attacking the city.

Sadly we were not able to see a real reunion with her former lover, since the famous Phoenix Punch was fighting in another part of the city. But maybe the spark was finally lit again for the most ever talked about hero-couple to come back together.

But as we all know the villain attack came as a surprise, so even with the sexy hero being back, probably longer than just temporarily, she was sadly not able to defeat the villain she fought against.

All in all, it was nothing more than just a nice occurrence to see her again. Maybe she is a bit out of touch with the general life of a hero. If so, now would be the best time to come back. With new dangers at the horizon, we need the great flamey Momma again, to get us out of the villain detention we were put into.

OPINION CORNER

Why we should be afraid of villains

HEATHER HAILEY

Whenever we hear a story about a hero defending the city and it’s people, we all do the same thing. A sigh of relief. But why do we do that? How many of us have ever actually gotten into any dangerous situation where we needed to be saved by a hero? Most of us have never even met one, be it hero or villain. Some of us have powers of their own, but were either too weak or impractical or we decided to not use them because dreams and ambitions are different for every single person. We are all our own organism, and we all are free to chose whatever path we decide to follow, or what kinda current we want to swim in. We are all unique, and this is perfect.

And this is exactly why we should be afraid of villains.

Because they started out the same way we did. Everyone has a sad story somewhere in them. Some of us can live with them, others seek help, others should seek help. And this is compeltely fine! This is all part of the self we are.

But villains decide to use their self for bad purposes. Are they really the evil ones? This is a thought everyone of us had once or twice. Their motifs might be good in the general sense. But they defeated the purpose of their self. They do not want to be their own organism. They want to have their own self be the one for everyone. They force their ideas on all of us.

Most of us are lucky enough to have never met one of the villains. But what should we do if it ever happens? Pray for a hero to save us?

Are heroes the better ones? Biased, we all would say that yes, heroes save people, so heroes are the good ones. But what are they doing with their self?

They basically do the same thing the villains do. Trying to force their ideas of morality and ethics on us. Which, to be fair, are of course a nicer choice than being forced in a villain-mindset. Just the general thought of the two tactis is the same.

Do we all really want to be like A.E.G.I.S. dictates? Do we all want to be like Fiery Hornet? I mean, both of those instances are great. Both try to do the good thing. But also try to stop bad things from happening. By what they define as bad.

So, what is it we should do? Be a hero or a villain? No! Be neither! Do what you can, when you must. Never lose sight of yourself. Be true to your self.

And most important: Live your day full of love! ♥

Coffee at an all-time high! Economy in shambles

CHAD BRADLEY

»The Price for coffee went up by 2 cents. The economy is in shambles and people should riot.«

»The problem of increased coffee prices is a complex one that is likely to have been overlooked. The price of coffee has increased by 2 cents. People should be outraged and boycott the company that raised the price of a Latte from $4 to $4.02«

»It's not that we don't care. It's just that we have other things to worry about. And let out core mission stay true- Mission #Coffee«

This morning, I paid for my coffee with a five dollar bill. It was the most expensive iced latte that I had ever bought and my card held back during contact so I recoiled slightly and slipped it off the edge.

I walked out and ran into people wearing coats to block the sun because they were protesting or begging on street corners.

"What's wrong?!" I asked innocently to a young person in front of me. "Uh, coffee prices went up," he said matter-of-factly, like that explained everything.

I ran frantically down the street dodging well dressed women to find where they were protesting.

That is when I heard what I wrote before. I knew nothing about the new stupid things the lawmakers made us do, again without consulting innocent citicenzs.

Having been living through these hard economic times in his own time, the present system only seems apt to quote Franklin D. Roosevelt: "Nobody knows what kind of world we are going to live in if we do not have enough coffee and if soy crops on 3rd world countries go unharvested."

Some people living around the world have been noticing the rise in cost for coffee when not only has it finally after four years surpassed its previous high, but with inflation hitting as high as 18%, customers are still paying 2 cents more for practically half less than it was before going up. And while a $1 cup of coffee is still seen as expensive by most people in developing countries, this is barely nothing to someone who is used to American prices.

Will we ever see such a perfect Cappucino ever again? Or is the government wanting to take it away from us?

Just like that or even worse could our beloved city have looked, if it weren’t for the heroes and their dedication to fight crime. Lorem ipsum dolor sit amet, consetetur sadipscing elitr, sed diam nonummod tempor invidunt ut labore et dolore magna aliquyam erat, sed diam voluptua.

Attack on CCH

Why a high school?

STEVE

The greatest news that all media outlets are fighting over were of course the attacks all throughout the city, made by non other than the newly established “Order of Disturbance” under their leader Blind Viper. They announced that they’re here – and they made themselves known with a bang, an explosive bang.

One of the places they attacked, besides the city center, the city hall and Malarster Gardens, has been the well known Cape Coast High School. Basically everyone wants to go there, seeing as most of their Alumni are either well known heroes (e.g. Phoenix Punch) or made for life. Our own Mayor has graduated from there, and the star and VIP Madeline Greels, the cute actress with range, also told the press, that she went to school there. All in all, a superstar-highschool, that makes a lot of people envious that never got in in the first place.

Maybe because of this, the prestige, or maybe because of envy, the school ground have been chosen as anoterh place of attack. Or maybe the villains thought that attacking a place filled with young students would result in lots of panic.

The first pictures from the so called “Point Of Impact”, paint a truly horrifying scene. We all saw the rubble in the city, the destruction and collapsed buildings. But it is something else to see the same chaos in front of a building made for the future generation, for kids. But, to be honest, the damage was pretty small, in comparison to other hotspots; and nothing actually hit the school building, according to official reports.

The school and it’s principal gave a lengthy statement at the end of the day, when the school and agents from A.E.G.I.S. made sure to get the students to the safety of their homes in special shuttles, in which they addressed their own lack of safety protocols and a promise to revise their other safety measures. They also announced, that no students were harmes, despite the panic and confusion.

The principal also made sure to inform the press and the worried parents, that an attack like this will never again hit them unprepared. In working together with established heroes and their corresponding organizations, they want to make sure to keep the youth as safe as possible. He personally apologized to the whole student body and emphasized, that the school’s sense of fun and community are the pillars of their educational curriculum.

A.E.G.I.S. on the other hand anounced, that the villain attacking the school has been defeated and caught. A villain we already reported about, because he is one of the more dangerous ones, with a high tendency towards destruction: The Fox. A villain that turns into a big lion with more muscles than mane.

The first time this villain could be taken into custody, beofre he was always able to flee the scene and turn back into his human appearance, to blend in with the crowd.

Apparently the name of the villain is “Eric Fox”, a former network administrator at a medium company here in Heldencoast. Fox himself says, that he is not a part of the Order, but was rather asked by Blind Viper to help them out and get revenge on the school. Furthermore he said, he want to get revenge on the kids, that managed to bring him down. To quote him directly: “I know their puny faces and smell. I will skin them alive and gorge their eyes!”

Officials confirmed what the Fox said, stating that it were in fact students from the Cape Coast High School fighting the villain and successfully beating him. They even managed to tie him up in some sort of bone shackles, easing the workload for law enforcement. The students identities are still unknown.

Students defeating a villain to save their school. Heroes comment on their success, but warn them: Be careful!

It is not known if the school knows the identity of those new heroes, and so far we haven’t received their official names just yet, but make sure to investigate further.

Other professional heroes commented on their deeds. Orothos even gave a lengthy statement, praising them for their courage and willingness to take risks. Others, like Morrigan, held back with compliments, and rather shared some words of wisdom with the younglings: “The world of heroism is dangerous. You did great – but never forget your own safety!”

Overall, we probably can expect a lot of new stuff coming from those new heroes. And hopefully we will catch their names!
